

From the editor

Dear readers!

Current issue of Russian Electronic Journal of Radiology, dedicated to radiology in urology, is a significant event: there is almost no urological disease, in which radiology could not be useful. Based on the past years achievements in diagnostic, modern radiology methods are already not unique. They are widely applied not only in capital medical urological centers, but also in regional medical institutions. Application of these methods provides early diagnostic of diseases, and timely choice of treatment method on early stages of illness. Training competent specialists for joint interpretation together with practical clinicians is really necessary.

Sincerely yours,
Chairman of Russian
urological society,
Academician,
N.A. Lopatkin
